A driver on I-90 just learned that when the speed limit says 80 and your SUV is flying through Montana at 95... there's a very good chance somebody is already watching.
Montana Highway Patrol has entered the future.
And apparently the future involves technology watching Montana highways like Big Sky Country just turned into a sci-fi traffic-control movie.

BREAKING NEWS

Unconfirmed reports can seem scattered across different parts of Montana, from the Billings area toward Bozeman and Helena, across western Montana, and farther north toward Great Falls and Kalispell.

Officials would need to confirm whether these reports were connected to an actual seismic event, and this post does not confirm a statewide earthquake or widespread damage.

But when the ground starts rumbling?

Montanans notice.
